▶ Running back LeSean McCoy had a lot to dance about, including a second-quarter touchdown.

Birds getting their swagger back

After four weeks of poor performances and excruciating turnovers, the Eagles took their first steps down a long road to redemption by beating the Redskins, 20-13. The team rode LeSean McCoy into the bye week on a high note and won the turnover battle against one of the league's worst quarterbacks, Rex Grossman. Andy Reid now has two weeks to prepare for an Oct. 30 clash with the Cowboys. {pages 17-18}

Occupy Philly: Mix of politics, pleasure

Building message is important, protesters say, but so is enjoying time during downtime ◆ Those at Dilworth Plaza 'politically partying at times'

Chill time needed

Occupy Philly has been increasingly planning events to blow off steam.

"We have a fair population and, from that, there are a lot of artists and musicians and people who want to make sure everyone's having fun," Goldstein said.

Yesterday morning, Occupy held a Goofy Sunday Mystery Fun Action and at night, an 80s-themed prom dance party.

"Occupy Philly is like its own neighborhood, a community that's not all about politics but about getting along together and having good time together." METRO

As Occupy Philly enters its third calendar week, the movement is still deciding on a unified political message and, at times, lapsing into party mode.

"To me, it's more of a social gathering or network," said Chazz Colon, 48, of North Philadelphia, who has been outside City Hall daily. "Nothing indicates change — we still have the same problems. We're still trying to be heard. I care about local issues — how are my kids going to be educated in Philadelphia? How are jobs going to be created in Philadelphia? Occupy has the mayor's ear, but they are not speaking to him about the real issues."

"It's a political movement, but it's a permanent community, too. It's social politics, just like at party conventions. It's about politics but kind of like a spirit week, too.

CHRIS GOLDSTEIN, OCCUPY'S PUBLIC RELATIONS TEAM

Others said that the "social" aspect of the movement was an important part of its revolutionary nature. "In order to peacefully change the status quo, you have to celebrate while you're doing it," said an occupier who came down from the Wall Street protests eight days ago. "Revolutions have to be celebratory. They can't solve things with simple anger."

"We've been politically partying at times. It depends on who you talk to because people from all walks of life are here," said teen activist Sally Sue.

"It was amazing, on Saturday night when the weather had improved, we were looking around at each other like, 'Wow, it's almost one in the morning and, like the rest of Philly, Occupy Philly is really getting down,'" Goldstein said. "People were dancing around drum circles, playing music on their laptops — it's a social community. Like everybody else, we have fun."

Arrests made in Tacony's chained captors

TACONY. Police have arrested three people in a bizarre incident in which four mentally challenged adults were found chained to a basement boiler.

Linda Ann Weston, 51, Thomas Gregory, 47, and Eddie Wright, 49, were taken into custody Saturday night and charged with aggravated assault, kidnapping, false imprisonment and related offenses.

Officers responding to the 4700 block of Longshore Avenue for reports of squatters around 10 a.m. Saturday instead found three men and one woman, each with the mental capacity of a 10-year-old, in a locked basement boiler room behind a steel door.

The victims were allegedly part of a human trafficking scheme and were held captive for their social security checks. At least one of those arrested is reportedly from Texas, where the victims may have been held for some time. Police say they also lived with one of the captors in West Palm Beach, Fla. before arriving in Philadelphia around Oct. 4. ALEX WIGGLESWORTH

Philly establishing transgender shelter

- Homeless facility for 15 to 18 people would provide 'holistic' help
- Will be first in country with specific goal of helping transgender people

When Jaden Hensley visited the Appletree Center homeless intake center on Cherry Street seeking shelter one September night, the transgender man found yet another place that he didn't fit in.

"We don't take transgenders," a security guard told Hensley, he recalls. A city spokesman said there's no such provision.

"It's against city policy to discriminate against LGBTs in city-funded programs," said Sade Ali, deputy commissioner of the city Department of Behavioral Health. "Can we monitor 24 hours a day the actions of folks who don't understand the ordinance? I wish we could."

Hensley's encounter may soon end with the creation of the Morris Home. The city-funded shelter will be the first to offer comprehensive health services specifically for the transgender community.

The home's proposed site has not been publicly announced, but Ali assures that the home is a quickly-dawning eventuality. "We are hoping to get the doors opened in November," she said. "Everyone deserves access to services and a place to go."

Helping Hensley

Though he was unable to find shelter in the city, Hensley began affordable hormone therapy through Philadelphia's Mazzoni Center and found a Bucks County behavioral therapist. He sells One Step Away papers in Philadelphia during the day and takes the River Line to a Trenton shelter at night.

3K-10K

Wide-ranged estimate by the city Department of Behavioral Health and Intellectual Disability for transgender people in Philadelphia. This broad estimate is a reflection of how understudied and underserved the population is, which Ali openly admits. She says she's working on the problem.

Can't we all just ride along same lanes?

Philly introduces new type of lane-sharing system on some Center City streets ‘Sharrows’ designate where cyclists, motorists must share road

There's now one more reason for motorists and cyclists in Center City to share the road peacefully: new sharrow lanes.

A sharrow is a shared lane marking for bikes and automobiles. It looks like a bike lane symbol with two arrows above it — a concept used on streets that are too narrow or too congested for dedicated bike lanes. The tool has been used in cities such as San Francisco, Portland and New York City, and one was recently installed on South 15th Street between Penn Square and Washington Avenue.

City transportation officials said others have been installed or will soon pop up on Christian Street in South Philadelphia and Main Street in Manayunk. It is part of the city's plan to extend the bike network to cover 300 miles.

"The purpose of those is to direct cyclists to just use that one lane and to alert motorists that they should expect to see cyclists in that lane," said Andrew Stober, from the city's Office of Transportation.

The sharrows are on the left side of the street, typically four feet from parked cars to maximize visibility for drivers and cyclists.

How's ride in bike lanes?

Stober said officials are still studying the effects of pilot bike lanes on 10th and 13th streets in Center City before issuing a final report.

The lanes could become the first north-south paths dedicated strictly to cyclists. They will be extended north to Spring Garden Street next month, Stober said, following the completion of road work by PennDOT. METRO/SDL

"I'm very happy that the city is willing to ... try and make bicycling better in the city. I think that there are obvious limits to what a treatment like that does, but it's a step in the right direction."

‘Rage’ goes global: Occupy worldwide

Protests begun in New York spread throughout Asia, Europe Violence troubles Italy, peaceful elsewhere

GIORGIO COSULICH/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Protests in Rome were marred by antagonists.

The global “Day of Rage” against the world’s financial system won some limited sympathy from political and economic leaders yesterday after protests that were peaceful everywhere but Italy.

Cities from east Asia to Europe and North America saw rallies on Saturday denouncing capitalism, inequality and economic crisis, but riot police were busy only in Rome.

The city cleared up yesterday, a day after masked “Black Bloc” protesters torched cars, attacked banks and hurled rocks.

“They must be condemned by everyone without reservation,” Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi said. Yet many Italians asked why police had managed to arrest only 12 of the violent demonstrators.

Lisbon and Madrid also saw tens of thousands march on Saturday. Spanish outrage has been fueled by multi-million-euro payouts for top staff at failed regional banks.

Other cities across the United States and Canada saw modestly sized and peaceful demonstrations and protesters gathered in their hundreds in Japan and across Southeast Asia.

“One word: accountability,” Professor Hayat Alvi of the United States Naval War Collegen said. REUTERS

Submit your pics for chance to win

The fifth Metro Photo Challenge, launched today, once again gives local photographers the chance to showcase their work against thousands of others from around the world.

The Photo Challenge will accept entries through Metrophotochallenge.com until Nov. 20.

This year there are four themes for entries: environment, relationships, moments of my life and imagination.

This year Metro is, under the Imagination category, inviting entries of images that have been manipulated digitally or are collages in addition to traditional photos.

In the categories of environment, relationships, moments from my life and imagination, there will be eight winners — four chosen by Metro’s panel of judges and four by people liking the entries on Facebook.

The eight local winners from Boston will then go head to head with local winners from every other Metro city around the world.

A panel of judges will then pick a global winner in each of the four categories. These Global Winners will be announced Dec. 20, and the winners will each win a trip worth 1,000 Euros ($1,380) to any city where Metro publishes (the full list is available at www.metro.lu).

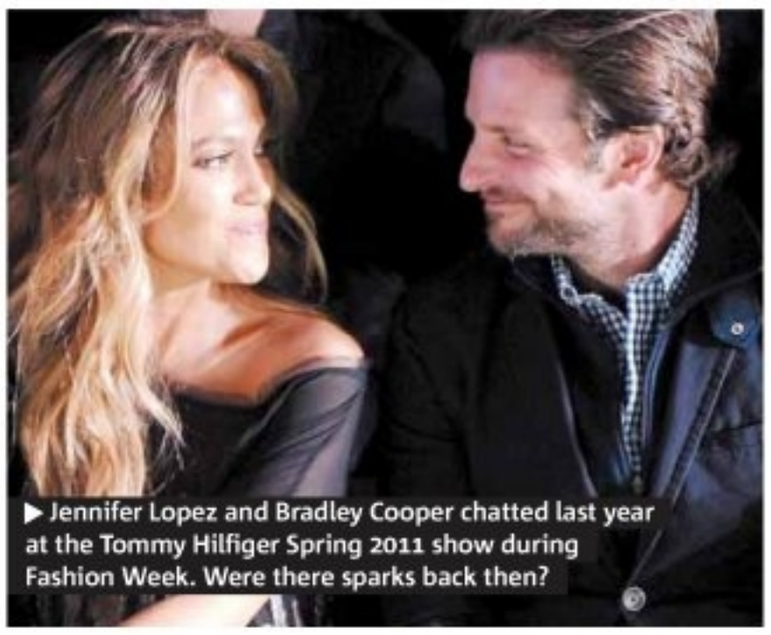
THE WORD

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

This weekend's celebrity movers and shakers

In today's column, we'll look at the celebrities moving toward one another, those moving farther apart and one who found his way out of the closet over the weekend.

On the up and up? Bradley Cooper and Jennifer Lopez. (Maybe!) The actor stepped out recently with a woman who looked a lot like the "American Idol" judge, though she was going to great lengths to shield herself from photographers, according to Us Weekly. A source close to the singer says it was in fact Lopez meeting up with the "Hangover" star, getting together again after having dinner last month. "After their date in New York, Bradley and Jennifer stayed in touch," the source says. "She does like his attention, and it makes her feel good that he seems so into her. She has a fun time with Bradley and he makes her laugh."



▶ Jennifer Lopez and Bradley Cooper chatted last year at the Tommy Hilfiger Spring 2011 show during Fashion Week. Were there sparks back then?

But while these two might be getting tight, it looks like Ashton Kutcher and Demi Moore are heading toward splitsville. A moving truck was seen pulling up to the couple's L.A. home late last week, according to Us Weekly. The moving company, Wetzel & Sons, would not divulge any information about the job. While it's unclear who may be vacating the premises, sources speculate Kutcher would be the one kicked to the curb. "Demi is humiliated," a source says. "She loves him, but can't forgive him for the embarrassment he has caused."

Meanwhile, although there is no gossip regarding who Zachary Quinto is or isn't dating, there is one thing for certain: He likes dating dudes.

In a New York interview, the "Star Trek" actor chatted about his role in the off-Broadway production of "Angels in America," saying, "As a gay man, it made me feel like there's still so much work to be done, and there's still so many things that need to be looked at and addressed."

And that, actors, is a great way to come out. No fanfare, no tabloid cover, just a straight-forward piece about your work. Mazel tov!

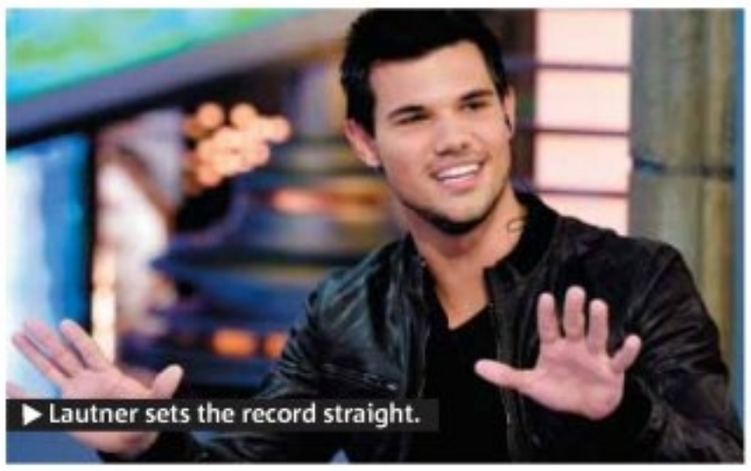
Talking points

Lautner likes ladies, OK?

Taylor Lautner is going on the record about his sexuality after being quizzed by the Australian edition of GQ about a recent night out with director Gus Van Sant and writer Dustin Lance Black, both of whom are openly gay. When asked if either of the men hit on him, Lautner said, "No, definitely not. I think they know I'm straight." The 19-year-old "Twilight" star said that the meeting was all business: "It's not a coincidence that there was a writer, a director and an actor at dinner."



▶ Lautner sets the record straight.

Chris Tucker forecloses

Chris Tucker may end up losing his Florida mansion, as he owes the bank more than $4 million on the foreclosed home — and that's on top of the $11.5 million lien the IRS placed on the home earlier this year for unpaid income taxes, according to Hollyscoop. Tucker, at least, is finding ways to joke about his situation. "That's the last time I let Wesley Snipes help me out with my taxes," Tucker quipped at a recent stand-up gig, according to the Miami New Times. He might not be laughing so much about the house's value: Tucker purchased it for $6 million, but the property is reportedly currently appraised at $1.6 million.

Downey: Forgive Mel!

Robert Downey Jr. wants the world to forgive Mel Gibson. While accepting an award from the American Cinematheque, the star took a moment to address Hollywood's treatment of the Oscar-winning director and actor, according to Us Weekly. "Unless you are without sin — and if you are, you are in the wrong f—ing industry — you should forgive him and let him work," Downey said. "There's nothing so much wrong with him. He's a good dude with a good heart."

Le Bon finds himself in the ordinary world

Though Simon Le Bon once sang that "wild boys never lose it," the Duran Duran singer experienced a huge physical setback when he blew out his voice during a concert earlier this summer.

"I really did lose my top range — a whole octave of my range — for about two months," he says. "The doctors were never able to give me a definitive diagnosis of what had occurred."

Le Bon went on vocal rest and his bandmates and he rejiggered their set, so that when the singer was ready to sing again, the songs would ramp up from their mellower material into the frenetic songs they have always been known for.

"After seven shows I'm starting to feel like I'm getting back to invincible again," says the 52-year-old singer.

Although there is an air of humor in this statement, there is also an air of truth. For a band whose sound so defined the 1980s, Duran Duran somehow escape being defined by that decade. For their most recent offering, last year's "All You Need is Now," they worked with producer Mark Ronson and achieved a sound that honors their legacy, while showing a keen awareness of where music is today.

"I think we're very lucky, in that we've had numerous hits, from the early stuff — I guess, 'Hungry Like the Wolf' was the first big hit and 'Is There Something I Should Know,' 'Rio,' 'The Reflex,' — we've got lots of songs that really have had huge success here, and when you have so many of them, it's difficult for any one song to enslave you," he says. "We could very easily go out and play a greatest hits show, but we're very conscious of the fact that to keep our excitement alive in the band, we need to make new albums, we need to make new songs and we need to play them to people."

Quoted

"We've become much more conscious of what's going on inside of my neck, and the rest of the band has been completely in support of me, because they don't want me to lose my voice for good."

SIMON LE BON ON HIS BANDMATES

Is there something they should know?

Le Bon says that Duran Duran has got their setlists down to a science, as far as what old hits and new numbers they play.

"We don't need to play as much as half the number of these songs, but not as little as a quarter," he says. "There really is a balance that seems obvious when you're playing a show. If you put four new songs together, then the audience gets twitchy. They want something they can dance to, and they know the words to, something they can sing along to, something they know can give them the feeling that they want."

Song Therapy

'In the Dark'

by Dev

The coolest thing about this song, currently No. 1 on the Billboard dance chart, is probably how the main riff — almost always done by some synth-y sounding instrument in club music — actually sounds like a saxophone. It probably isn't an actual sax, but it is a spicy sound to hear that's unexpected. Credit for that goes to producers, the Cataracs. You'll recognize Dev's voice from "Like a G6" by the Far East Movement from last year. In this song, she sings about dancing in the dark and letting her hands do what they want, but the line you'll be singing the next morning a little too loudly is, "I've got a sex drive. Push to start," especially if you do have one of those newish cars that doesn't need a key to get it going. Regardless, this song is the key to get your night going. Where to hear: iTunes, Spotify

Green up the office

You recycle at home, so what's the deal with tossing that giant stack of paper on the copier tray in the trash? How you can leave a softer environmental footprint at the office

At home, most of us wouldn't think about leaving the air-conditioner on full blast while leaving town for a couple days. Or tossing a luncheon's worth of plastic bottles directly in the trash. Or using individually packaged creamers for a cup of coffee from a massive pot we'll never finish.

And yet in the office, these are common practices even among those who consider themselves environmentally friendly. In their new book, "The Complete Idiot's Guide to Greening Your Business," co-authors Trish Riley and Heather Gadonniex look at companies' most wasteful policies, as well as practical solutions — of which, Riley points out, there are many.

"Solutions are happening just as fast as the problems are — and people don't realize that, they think we're just sunk," she says. "And sure, we're not going to save the planet unless big businesses get on board, but what's cool is that big businesses are getting on board. They're doing these things to meet consumer needs — because they know this is what we want."

One of the companies profiled in the book, Clif Bar, goes far beyond the usual recycling bins, offering incentives for employees who drive hybrid cars and take public transportation to work in addition to offering flexible telecommuting options to further reduce fuel usage. While these perks end up costing an employer a little extra, they contribute to something almost priceless: The perception that they care.

"Money talks," admits Riley. "But when they show their customers that money is not the most important thing, that they care about our environment and the future of it, that goes a long way — especially with consumers with children."

monica.weymouth@metro.us

What can you do?

Riley's recommendations for a greener office:

- Don't simply turn off your computer at night — unplug it. The machines use a small amount of "phantom energy" when plugged in, hence the subtle glow and eerie hum of a room full of computers that are seemingly off.
- Establish an office compost bin in the kitchen in addition to the now-standard recycling bins.
- Make sure lights are off and that heating and cooling systems are adjusted for hours when the office is empty.

▶ Desk-side recycling bins make it easy to do the right thing. For more on how to green your business and community, visit Trish Riley's sustainability website, www.gogreennation.org.

High-profile jobs not as desirable as they seem

Doctors, executives, airline pilots and some of their prestigious peers don't have it as good as you think Why these might be overrated careers

While they make for great cocktail conversation, some of the most prestigious careers aren't quite as enviable as they seem, according to a new report from job search portal CareerCast.com.

"There's a lot of perceptions out there about what a good job is, and a lot of the times the perception is wrong," says Career Cast publisher Tony Lee. "Yes, these do pay a lot, but there are a lot of drawbacks to these jobs. We looked at things like stress, work/family balances, the hiring outlook down the road and compensation."

Career Cast's list includes some of the usual suspects in a struggling economy (stock brokers, real estate agents) as well as plenty of health care professionals.

We asked Lee for some background on those that topped the list.

Senior corporate executive

Average income: $160,141

While some high-ranking execs are undoubtedly dismissive of the Occupy gang, others are feeling the heat — albeit in swanky corner offices. "Senior corporate executives are under extreme pressure right now. You have falling profits, you have shareholder pressure," says Lee. "You look at the protests and you think, 'These people don't care.' But a lot of them do care — they don't want to do layoffs, and they're working more hours than ever."

Commercial airline pilot, flight attendant

Average incomes: $106,153; $40,184

As fuel prices rise and airlines cut back on staff, passengers aren't the only ones who are less comfortable. "The reality is the hours are at their highest that they've ever been, you have less control over your days and pay has not risen," says Lee. Something to keep in mind when you're watching "Pan Am" — or getting ready to grumble about the skimpy bag of pretzels on your next flight.

MONICA WEYMOUTH
monica.weymouth@metro.us

LIFESIZE

▶ Surgeons earn an average of $365,258 a year, but there's never an easy day at the office — especially in 2011.

Surgeon, physician, psychiatrist

Average incomes: $365,258; $192,065; $160,242

"What these all have in common is that they're responsible for people's lives. People are reliant on them, and that has always been stressful," says Lee. "But more recently, with government regulations and more paperwork, it's just not the case anymore that you can play golf on Wednesdays and pay back your loans."

5 Smart jobs for college students

Looking to make more than a little extra cash? These part-time gigs can earn you some real money

DIGITAL VISION

Certified personal trainers can earn more than $20 per hour.

Whether you're just looking for some extra party cash or trying to make ends meet with tuition, the college job is vital to survival for a number of students. While there are many part-time options, some can prove to be more lucrative than others. Here are five of the most well-paying jobs to have while you're in school, plus stats on what you could earn, according to Indeed.com.

Restaurant server/bartender

Whether you're waiting tables at the classiest joint in town or slinging drinks at everybody's favorite dive bar, the cash potential is endless. If you're good at your job and know how to up-sell, you could be raking in hundreds of dollars per night. Sometimes, the best way to land one of these jobs is by being a regular first. (The friendly, chatty kind of regular, not the intoxicated, mouthy regular who gets thrown out.)

Administrative assistant

For this job, you can venture to businesses both on- or off-campus. On-campus offices are probably more apt to hiring students and off-campus businesses can appreciate the savvy Web and organizational skills of the modern college student. You might rake in as much as $15,000 a year. A polished resume and an in-person visit is the best way to land one of these jobs.

Web designer

Today's college students are more tech-savvy than any previous generation. Take advantage of the skills you have, because employers are desperately searching for qualified people. If you have already designed a site, market it through social networking. Post an ad for your services on job sites and Craigslist. Drop in to small businesses and speak with them about how a website might be able to boost revenue.

Get this gig!

Personal Trainer

You get to make your own hours, plus your time at work doubles as your work out. You'll have to shell out some cash to get your certification, but you could be making upward of $20 an hour! Not bad for a part-time job. Once you get certified, market yourself through Facebook and Twitter, and never underestimate the power of a business card.

Hotel clerk

This type of job will look great on a resume and even give you a head start on your career if you plan to go into management or hospitality. To get this job, show up looking sharp with a big smile and a professional resume highlighting anything you've done that deals with people or service. The hourly wage will vary from place to place, but you could be making as much as $15,000 per year if you work 20 hours per week.

Hip-hop culture on the campus

Underground hip-hop scenes can thrive with help from the resources of colleges Emery Petchauer on the benefit to students, artists and schools

Around 1990, Emery Petchauer was exposed to De La Soul and A Tribe Called Quest. His life would never be the same.

Now — after 20 years spent in various hip-hop scenes as an artist, organizer and scholar — Dr. Petchauer has completed his first book examining the culture of hip-hop on college campuses. "Hip-Hop Culture in College Students' Lives: Elements, Embodiment, and Higher Edutainment" will be released by Routledge Books this month. "There's been a lot of talk about hip-hop in education for a while, but most of the time it's focused on how teachers use rap music in order to teach," says Petchauer, who is currently a professor at Lincoln University in Philadelphia. "I wanted to look at the creative spaces where people create hip-hop and develop habits of body, habits of mind — and how they take those habits into educational environments. It's a way to conceptualize and understand their education."

Based on Petchauer's doctoral thesis, "Hip-Hop Culture" examines the underground hip-hop scenes at three anonymous U.S. colleges located in Southern California, the Northeast and the South. "I wasn't focusing on students that just listened to hip-hop. I was interested in the kids that create and sustain hip-hop culture — these are MCs, dancers, DJs, graffiti writers and event organizers," explains Petchauer. "Hip-hop has a tendency to co-opt the power of larger institutions in society and appropriate them for a different use. There's an incredible amount of resources on college campuses that people involved with hip-hop can use to their advantage. College radio and rehearsal spaces have had this core relationship with hip-hop from the beginning."

Erudite critic: OWS analysis

A social, psychological and political analysis of the ongoing Occupy Wall Street movement demonstrates the theories of anarchism in their respective lack of a thorough analysis of American society. The OWS protesters criticize the corporative status quo and the military as instruments of American foreign policy, and have neither a nascent political party nor a platform of principles or demands necessary for concrete political and economic reform. JOSEPH N. MANAGO, VIA E-MAIL

In space, no one to sell to

RE: "WE'D BE WILLING TO LEAVE": When he fantasizes about the "1 percent" leaving us to colonize another planet and taking medical science, iPods and sporting venues with them, Jesse Aldous suggests that some of the top 1 percent aren't as bright as they think. Who they will be selling gadgets, medical care and sports tickets to up there — themselves? The "1 percent" need the "99 percent" a lot more then we need them. In fact, some of us will be happy to help build your spaceships for you — at least you will have finally created some jobs. ROBERT TROMBETTA, PHILADELPHIA

End it: It's the jobs, stupid!

You want to put an end to this protest? Wall Street was bailed out by the tax payers of these here United States, and every large institution should repay the citizens by offering full-time jobs. There's no way around this: Job creation is what we need, otherwise, this will continue with no end in sight; these folks have nothing better to do. JIMMY CORREA, VIA E-MAIL

This protest really stinks

It's time to stand up and demand the police put an end to OWS. They have become nothing more than a bunch of bums hangin' out in a shantytown that the taxpayers are paying to maintain. I say let them sleep in their own feces — they seem to be comfortable with that. MICHAEL CHIMENTI, VIA E-MAIL

Occupy Wall Street stinks to high heaven. There is the smell of bundled mortgages, the smell of corporate welfare, the smell of foreclosure; the smell of tax breaks for the wealthy, of irrelevant elections, of pepper spray ... but the most disturbing smell is that of those standing up and screaming loudly, "Enough is enough!" SUZY SANDOR, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Be extra prudent in the management of your resources or be prepared to assume more debt than you can comfortably handle. You won't like taking on so much financial obligation.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Should opposition come from an unexpected quarter, you could get caught off guard. Figure out what precipitated this turn of events.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. If you are taken to task for not doing something you were supposed to do, don't make excuses. It'll give you much more peace of mind to start performing instead.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Guard your behavior when in a social or group setting, so that you don't absentmindedly do something that would be construed as ill-mannered.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. If you allow outside forces to invade your domicile, conditions will not be as placid as you would prefer them to be. Why invite trouble?

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Should you find yourself up against a person you dislike, don't make matters worse by letting your feelings be known. If you do, you will only add to an already bad situation.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. If you've been covering up or failing to do something that was expected of you, it could be a time of reckoning. The things that you've been neglecting will be brought to light.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Unless you make it a point to take a hand in formulating important plans, others involved will do so for you.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Guard against taking on an involvement that you're not equipped to handle. You could quickly find yourself in way over your head and cause all kinds of problems.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. You're someone who usually stays calm, cool and collected, yet there is a strong possibility you could lose your composure over something insignificant. Don't get caught off guard. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

EAGLES 20 | REDSKINS 13 Up next: Bye week

Birds snap skid with 20-13 win at 'Skins

Eagles finally respond to adversity in a positive way ◗ Reid not off hot seat, but surely feeling a lot more comfortable ◗ McCoy, Vick seal deal late ◗ NFC East there for the taking LeSean McCoy took the handoff, swept to the outside and appeared to have the game-sealing first down on a crucial second-and-3 with 2:26 showing on the clock.

Naturally, the jovial running back had to celebrate somehow. His choice? To punch his coach in the gut.

"He can do whatever he wants today," said Andy Reid, who buckled as McCoy's fist connected with his chest.

"I thought he was a tough guy, maybe he's not," McCoy said. "I got to ask Tammy [Reid's wife], 'How tough is he?'"

McCoy, who credited Brian Westbrook for the maneuver, was ruled a yard short on the play. But following a failed challenge, Mike Vick plowed ahead for the final yard a few seconds later. Vick's run clinched a 20-13 victory over the Washington Redskins and snapped the Eagles' four-game losing streak.

"I'm a tough motherf—er. Toughest motherf—er you ever seen."
ASANTE SAMUEL, WHO LEFT BRIEFLY WITH A BRUISED BACK

"We're going to enjoy this victory," Vick said. "We're going to enjoy our bye week, then come back and start the season all over again."

The Eagles are off this week before returning to host Dallas Oct. 30.

Despite a wild week, which included fans calling for Reid's job, the team remains focused. They insist they are taking it "one game at a time," but most players still feel the NFC East is there for the taking.

After yesterday's win, the Eagles improved to 1-1 in the division.

"No question," said center Jason Kelce, when asked if the Eagles could still win the East.

"I don't think it's out of our reach by any stretch of the imagination. I think we've been getting better each and every week, and we're striving for consistency."

INDYCAR TRAGEDY

Indy 500 champ killed in crash

▶ The wreck was unavoidable.

Two-time Indianapolis 500 champ Dan Wheldon died yesterday after a horrific crash in the opening laps of the Las Vegas Indy 300.

The English driver, 33, was caught in a fiery 15-car pileup at Las Vegas Motor Speedway. He was flown by helicopter to a nearby hospital but succumbed to "unsurvivable injuries," IndyCar Series CEO Randy Bernard said in a statement.

Wheldon won the 2005 Indy Racing League title, as well as the '05 and '11 Indianapolis 500s.

The race was canceled after the crash, but drivers returned to the track for a five-lap salute.

METRO/REUTERS

Coleman, defense among highlights

Three things we saw in yesterday's victory ◐ Eagles have a real safety net up top ◐ Defense finally living up to its potential ◐ Well played, Mike

1 Safety net: Kurt Coleman was reinserted into the lineup and made the most of it. The second-year safety recorded three interceptions, marking the first time since 1966 that an Eagle had three picks in a game.

It looks like Coleman is the starting strong safety moving forward, with Nate Allen — who nabbed a first-half interception — holding down the free safety spot. Both players have seen their stock soar.

2 Winning in the turnover battle: The Eagles, who entered with a league-worst, minus-10 takeaway ratio, preached all week about limiting turnovers.

Well, that message was received in Washington, where the only real blemishes were two interceptions. The Eagles' defense made up for those by collecting four of their own. Mike Vick did lose the football once, but he turned it into a 15-yard roughing-the-passer penalty.

3 Hip, hip, hooray: Vick knows how to keep it loose, even in the heat of battle. After scrambling for 31 yards down the sideline, he kicked a mini-football right at a Redskins cheer leader. Vick stopped and pointed to his heart.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Vick

After the game, the Eagles QB concluded his press conference by apologizing to the Redskins cheerleaders.

Meanwhile, Vick left yesterday's game briefly in the third quarter after absorbing a LaRon Landry hit. Vince Young came in for two plays, which included an interception, before Vick returned on the team's next offensive series.

"I got hit and I had some dirt in my eyes and I really couldn't see," Vick said.

Union clinches playoff berth after Toronto draw

What a great day for a second-year franchise.

The Union found out they had made the MLS playoffs following Saturday's 1-1 draw with Toronto FC at a sold-out PPL Park.

That's quite impressive, considering this team hasn't been in existence all that long.

"I'm very excited for our players, our organization and especially our great fans," said Sebastien Le Toux, who scored his team-leading 11th goal against Toronto. "It feels really great, and now we have to keep it going. That's the next goal."

Philadelphia is 11-7-15, and extended its unbeaten streak to eight (3-0-5).

The Union is one of nine teams that's clinched a playoff berth. One spot is up for grabs.

Next up is a trip to rival New York on Thursday, before finding out where the postseason journey will begin.

"This was our goal from Day 1. We always knew it was possible. We worked as hard as we could and got it done."
MIDFIELDER BRIAN CARROLL

This much the team knows: They're in.

"This was our goal from Day 1," midfielder Brian Carroll said. "We always knew it was possible. We worked as hard as we could and got it done. It feels great. We're all very happy and excited about the next step."

Smaller SUVs beware the new Land Rover

- British sports utility brand wants to expand appeal to urbanites
- What new model gains in practical appeal, it loses in off-road range

2012 Evoque coupe at a glance

- Speed: 0 to 60 mph in 7.1 seconds
- Gas mileage per gallon: 28 highway, 18 city
- Price as tested: $59,820
- Best feature: Stylish appearance and that massive panoramic sunroof.
- Worst feature: No low-range off-road.
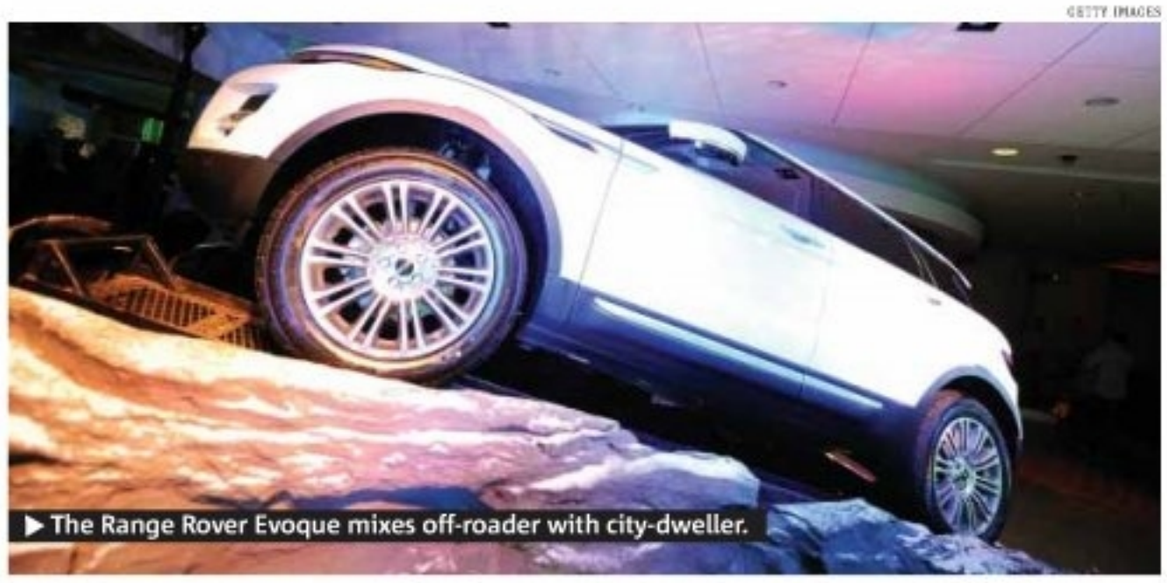
- Target buyer: The small-SUV shopper who wants cutting-edge looks and acceptable gas mileage.

GETTY IMAGES



▶ The Range Rover Evoque mixes off-roader with city-dweller.

You've never considered owning a Land Rover? Clearly you don't live in the Australian outback or have a Hollywood entourage to cart around between house parties in the Hills. Maybe you can't rationalize the 12 miles per gallon in the city.

You might have a BMW or Lexus SUV, but until now you've been safe from the siren call of the Gaydon, U.K.-based brand.

Well, take a look at the new Range Rover Evoque.

It's a dazzlingly designed Trojan horse, aimed squarely at owners of the X3, RX and Audi Q5, an anti-box that looks like a crossover, while retaining a dash of Land Rover's legendary off-road capability. Old-school Land Rover drivers who actually do drive in the bush will hate it.

There's a long-held perception that a Land Rover is an impractical purchase. The Evoque's starting price of $44,000 is also more accessible for urbanites aspiring to get back to nature, or, at least, reaching suburbia's big-box stores.

The inside is distinctly carlike. There's plenty of room, but it's more like the space of a midsize sedan than a fat SUV. The entire roof is glass, from door frame to door frame.

The Evoque drives nearly as nicely on the road as any crossover or small SUV on the market, except for the latest-generation BMW X3. The X3 is faster, more fluid and outright more capable on-road; nearly as good as the 3 Series sedan.

For all that style and on-road comfort, you've got to give something, and in this case it's a measure of off-road prowess. For hard-core off-roaders will find, to their horror, the Evoque has no low range, the type of low-end gearing needed for truly serious terrain. BLOOMBERG

Philly-area dealerships warm up for coat drive

The Auto Dealers CARing for Kids Foundation, the philanthropic arm of the Philadelphia Auto Show, announced that starting this past weekend the organization will distribute 22,548 brand-new winter coats to less fortunate children living throughout the region as part of its fourth annual Driving Away the Cold program.

"This initiative has grown every year," Kevin Mazzucola of the Auto Dealers CARing for Kids Foundation and Auto Dealers Association of Greater Philadelphia said. "We started back in 2008 ... [and] distributed 17,000 new coats then. Each year, we've been able to do more and more. This would not be possible without the participation of our dealer members. It hasn't been an easy four years for them, given the recent industry turmoil and state of the economy."

The Driving Away the Cold program is a two-part program: The charitable foundation jump-starts the annual campaign with a donation of 10,000 new child-size coats, and then area auto dealers contribute as part of a special monthlong campaign.

An additional 11,640 new coats were donated this year by the 163 participating dealerships, making the four-year campaign total exceed 79,000. METRO

▶ Stacks of coats were shown off this past weekend.
